Sidewalk Maintenance/Repair Ordinance Is Still Pending

By wstockwin2024@gmail.com

The sidewalk repair and maintenance ordinance almost made it through its second reading at the January 22 city council meeting, but was sent back to city staff for more clarification on determining whether trees causing problems are owned by the city or the property owner. At issue is the question of who pays for sidewalk repairs due to damage caused by tree roots.

Council member Trinity Burruss was not present for the meeting, but called in on the phone an hour after the meeting began.

After sending the sidewalk ordinance back to staff, the council heard a presentation on the Seniors First – Placer Rides Program, which helps county senior citizens get around using volunteer drivers who are then reimbursed for mileage. (See page 5 for more information).

The council also approved its committee assignments for 2025 on a 4-0 vote before moving to its last piece of official business regarding temporary improvements to the outdoor dining area on N. Main St.

The lengthy discussion between the council, business owners and members of the public boiled down to a choice between one large outdoor dining area, or three smaller ones anchored to specific businesses. In the end, the council directed staff to set up a public workshop in late February to try and work out a plan.

The January 8 Colfax City Council meeting started on time with Mayor Pro Tem Caroline McCully holding the gavel, as Mayor Sean Lomen was absent. All other council members were present.

The consent calendar passed on a 4-0 vote, and Calfire reported that four strike teams from Placer County were working in Los Angeles County.

An audit report on the fiscal year ending June 30, 2024 was the first of two presentations on the agenda. Richardson & Co. managing partner/auditor Ingrid Shepline said the audit showed the general fund and sewer fund each stood at slightly over $3 million, a minimum pension liability, and a state loan of $6.2 million that's being repaid at a rate of $374,000 a year for another 16 years.

Colfax Lions Need A Few Good Volunteers

By wstockwin2024@gmail.net

Where have all the volunteers gone? That's the question that has Paul 'Red' Houck, president of the Colfax Area Lions club, worried these days.

"People aren't volunteering the way they used to anymore," said Houck. "And it's not just the Lions. I'm probably speaking for every other non-profit organization in town. People just aren't joining."

Houck illustrates the problem with the situation the Lions currently face. "This club's 100-year anniversary in Colfax will be in 2028 and, frankly, I don't know if we will make it to that."

He said that three years ago the club had 39 members, but now has 22. And two of those live out of state, whittling the number of available hands on deck to 20.

Sheipline called it a “clean audit requiring minimum adjustment” and applauded the city’s administrative services officer, Shanna Stahl, for her “excellent work” and finished saying “the city’s in very good financial condition.”

Following no questions from either side of the room, the council voted 4-0 to believe her and moved on to the second presentation for the winners of the city’s first annual holiday outdoor light contest. The first place winner of a $50 MarVal gift card was Jeff Hoge, 48 West Grass Valley St.; Ken & Fabiola Morse at 102 Oak Hill St. took second and a $30 MarVal gift card; and Karl & Debra Fullenwider at 314 N. Main St. took third and a $20 MarVal gift card. Fourteen residents entered the contest.

The proposed sidewalk repair maintenance and liability ordinance passed its first reading after some discussion. City planning consultant Kathy Pease walked the council through the changes they’d requested at the December 11 meeting, displaying a list that included:

- Extension of the time for repairs from 60 to 90 days.
- Allowance for property owners requesting an extension beyond 90 days.
- Flexibility on payment options including voluntarily adding costs to the tax rolls.
- Definition of ‘good faith effort’ and standards of repair.
- Consideration of property owners dealing with corners or on hillsides.

- Consideration for dead end sidewalks.

During a brief discussion, council member Larry Hillberg voiced concerns over how widely information about the proposed ordinance had been disseminated, but he joined the majority in a unanimous vote.

There were two items of official council business on the agenda. The first was a city procurement policy amendment that would raise the city manager’s purchase authority to procure supplies, equipment and other services from $10,000 up to $25,000. With little discussion the item passed on a 4-0 vote.

The second item was a request by Golden State Patient Care (GSPC), the city’s sole cannabis retailer, to terminate the semiannual financial audit and physical inspections that are costing GSPC $11,000 a year.

SCI, the consultant that has conducted the audit and inspections since 2019, told the city that no deficiencies have been found to date, and that GSPC is, and has been, in compliance with all state and local regulations. GSPC founder and owner Jim Dion reminded the council that he has been in compliance since he opened 22 years ago. After no one from the council or public spoke against the request, the council voted 4-0 to grant it.

Update From Supervisor Cindy Gustafson

As we start a new year and I begin a new term of office, I encourage you to join me in setting goals and priorities that will positively impact our residents and communities.

One of my ongoing priorities is fostering greater public engagement in the decisions that shape Placer County. While we strive daily to address the needs of our 400,000+ residents, only a small percentage of voices actively participate in our meetings, workshops, and committees.

Government works best when we collaborate with a diversity of perspectives and strive for common understanding. Your involvement can truly make a difference.

This year brings exciting opportunities to engage with critical projects, such as the continued work on long-term planning, transportation, forest health, and housing needs.

Whether you're interested in addressing local challenges or shaping policies that will guide our Tom Passanisi was a native San Francisco, North Beach Italian. His family were fisherman and their boats were docked at fisherman's wharf.

Tom grew up in the Italian area of San Francisco.

Tom joined the Navy and did a tour of duty in Vietnam. He was a member of the COLFAX VFW and the American Legion and he was also a member of the Colfax lions and very active in the Colfax community.

Tom loved music and he was very good guitar player. He also performed with the lyrical locos.

Tom had a dream of a fancy Cioppino dinner with linen tablecloths, China dishes, and stemware and cloth napkins. He wanted to share his Italian fishing heritage with his friends and he was still alive to see pictures of the first Cioppino dinner, but was too sick to attend. We are all here keeping Tom's dream alive.

future, I hope you'll consider attending one of our many commission, council, and committee meetings – these are very important steps in the process to final Board of Supervisors decisions.

There are many volunteer roles available across the county. Serving on a commission, committee, or council is not always easy, but it is deeply rewarding.

Take a moment to explore the wide variety of openings on boards and advisory groups this year. Whether your passions lie in housing, environmental conservation, public health, or youth services, there's a place where your voice can have a meaningful impact. For more information on board, commission or committee vacancies go to <https://www.placer.ca.gov/2841/Committees-Commissions>.

"And of those, about 12 are active because they are physically still able to do it," he said. "Three years from now the majority of our members will be over 80. Our youngest member right now is 45. And as much as we have tried to get people to join they just aren't interested."

And while volunteers and memberships are declining, he said requests from other groups for help are increasing. After listing some of the many school programs the Lions support, from buying sports equipment to providing various scholarships – including a Kindle reading program in Chicago Park – Houck says, "If the Lions cease to exist the scholarships won't be there anymore because all of the fundraisers we do for the schools won't happen."

It clearly frustrates him. "In our generation we were taught to give something back to the community that gives to you. Now it's a different world than the one we grew up in.

"My big point is that I don't really care if you become a Lion, just come in and volunteer to help out. It's as simple as that."

Lions' Asian Dinner Fundraiser Packed Them In

A full-house crowd at the Colfax Veterans Hall was recently hosted to an Asian dinner fundraiser from VFW Post 2003. A social hour, a silent auction and dinner served by local scout troops boys and girls made for a memorable evening for all guests. Sharon Connors, President of the VFW Auxiliary and Chair of the Asian Dinner said, "All of our dinner guests had a great time and the VFW is grateful for the community support of the dinner. Because of the funds raised, we will be able to expand our program for youth activities, scholarships and a variety of Veteran's programs including "Quilts for Vets."

"While it is February one can taste the full joys of anticipation. Spring stands at the gate with her finger on the latch."
– Patience Strong

While most of us have been enjoying the sunshine this winter, and all the outside activities that it has allowed us, we eagerly await spring and all that it has to offer.

This month we will be highlighting Historic Colfax Downtown Association (HCDA).

According to the association's website HCDA is "dedicated to preserving, promoting, and revitalizing the heart of Colfax."

"By organizing impactful events and fostering connections among businesses, nonprofits, and the community, HCDA aims to create a thriving downtown that reflects the unique spirit of Colfax."

I had the privilege of sitting down with Erin Newington, founder and president of the association, to discuss what the association will be bringing to Colfax as a community.

HCDA seeks to gather community input, align efforts and create a unified vision for downtown Colfax events, as well as apply for grants to benefit historic downtown Colfax as a whole.

HCDA held its first brainstorming session with community members, non-profits, local businesses and event planners at Sierra Vista Community Center on January 29, 2025. It was a time of sharing ideas, events and a networking opportunity for the upcoming year.

If you want to find out more about Historic Colfax Downtown Association and how you can get involved, please visit them at:

Coffee and Conversations has started back up this year and is held on the first Thursday of every month from 8:00 a.m. – 9:00 a.m. at 99 Railroad Street, and we would love to see all of you there!

We are lining up our speakers for the year, so if you or someone you know would like to be considered, please reach out by email to: amanda@colfaxareachamber.com.
